Auto Licenses On Sale Mar. 15

Sale of Virginia's 1963 state license plates will begin Friday, March 15.

As in the past, state passenger car license plates will cost $10 when accompanied by a correctly executed insurance certification found on the back of the application for license. Those motorists who intend to license a motor vehicle for which there is no automobile liability insurance coverage in effect must pay an additional $20 above the cost of the license plates. A Dept. of Motor Vehicles spokesman said that the $20 additional Uninsured Motorist Fee will furnish no insurance protection to the individual paying this fee. The money is turned over to the State Corporation Commission and is used to lower premiums paid by motorists who carry liability insurance on their cars.

Carver Teams Win District Crown

Top seeded Panthers and Pantherettes emerged from the district tournament with all honors that were awarded the teams for the district championship. A total of eight trophies were captured by the teams and their members: two visitation championship awards, two tournament championship awards, one most valuable player award which was won by Roberta Ferguson, and all tournament team honors to Roberta Ferguson Joeann Megginson, Charles Fleshman, and Gene Scruggs.

Carver teams put on a dazzling display of basketball skills as they overwhelmed their opponents by one sided scores in the four contests in which they participated. In the opening game of the tournament, the Panther-ettes scored on every conceivable type of shot and from every position on the court as they shellacked Russell Grove of Amelia by a score of 68-11. The scoring was led by Wanda Goode with Roberta Ferguson and Laverne Ligon with 22-16, and 10 points respectively. As the visitors defense continued to collapse on Roberta Ferguson, the district leading scorer, she had to pass off on a number of occasions and her team mates were able to capitalize on easy baskets. When the defense didn't collapse Roberta was able to score herself and as a result of this type of play, she was voted the tournament's most valuable girl player. Other members of the team who aided the cause were Lois Johnson, Joan Turner, Evelyn Cheatham, Deloris Hamlet, and Carol Andrews.

The Panthers were also impressive in their victories as they won the first contest 55-35 over fourth plac competitor Carter G. Woodson and in the championship game were more impressive as they defeated Charlotte C.H. the team that upset the second placed team, Central High of Hamherst by a score of 75-52. Carver was led in the scoring column by Gene Scruggs Steve Watson, Robert Humbles, and Charles Fleshman with 41, 29, 21, and 18 points respectively.

Today the Panthers are representing the district in the State Tournament being held at Hampton Institute Hampton, Virginia beginning today and ending March 9, 1963.

Predicts Curbs Based On Pounds And Acreage

(MH-30, the controversial sucker control chemical has been much in the news lately, as also, the entire subject of tobacco quality and production methods in the Old Dominion. The TIMES-VIRGINIAN received permission to published interview with Watt Abbitt as one means of helping to clarify the subject.)

By Staff Writer,

Richmond Times Dispatch

WASHINGTON, March 2 — Rep. Abbitt (D-Va) expects to see a bill in Congress soon to substitute poundage - acreage controls for the present acreage controls on tobacco production.

When it comes, hearings will be held — probably by the House tobacco subcommittee, of which he is chairman, or else by the full House Agriculture Committee, he said.

He said he didn't think a recent Department of Agriculture "inter-agency committee" report provided the definte answer on whether or not the controversial sucker control chemical, maleic hydrazide (MH-30), hurts flue-cured tobacco quality.

With today's system of controlling tobacco production by limiting acres only, yields per acre have kept climbing. The experts say the quality has gone down as the yield went up. Limiting pounds per acre as well as acres has been suggested by many.

"Face Up to Problem"

"Sooner or later we've got to face up to the problem and decide whether that's the route that should be followed," Abbitt said.

It was his subcommittee which asked in 1960 for a thorough Department of Agriculture study and answer on the effects of MH-30. Results of the two-year study were released in 1962. Abbitt said recently the subcommittee didn't feel the study provided "a scientific answer."

An inter - agency report on leaf quality factors, signed by seven officials of agencies in the department, came out last week. Based on the findings of the original two - year study, it blasted MH-30.

Asked whether he thought the new report was the definite answer, Abbitt said, "I don't feel like it is. We expected them to say in no uncertain terms whether it's permissable or not permissible to use the stuff. It was not that kind of report."

The report did not provide a clue on the issue of reducing price supports on leaf treated with MH-30. A National Tobacco Industry Advisory Committee recommended to Secretary of Agriculture Freeman last November that they be reduced to 50 per cent.

But a storm blew up, and Rep. Cooley (D-NC), chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, and officials and growers in Carolina and states to the south kept the heat on Freeman. They say MH-30 hasn't been proved harmful.

No Clue Given

Freeman has made no announcement, and there is considerable speculation that the recent department report and a proposed revision of tobacco grades standards will be all that is forthcoming.

Abbitt was asked about the likelihood of a bill to provide a crash federal research program to find a substitute for MH-30, a step proposed by a leaf industry quality committee. He thought this might come soon, too.
